MEET THE PRESS WEEKEND LISTINGS

(SUNDAY 01/04) Exclusive! Two days before the 111th Congress convenes, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid (D-NV) joins us to discuss the Democratic agenda for the new session. We'll also ask about his plan to block Roland Burris's appointment by embattled Illinois Gov. Rod Blagojevich to President-elect Barack Obama's vacant senate seat. Do Senate leaders have the legal authority to refuse to seat Burris? Plus, the fighting continues between Israel and Hamas in Gaza. When will it end? What role should the United States play in this conflict and what other foreign policy challenges await President-elect Obama in 2009? Insights and analysis from our roundtable of journalists: NBC's Richard Engel, The Atlantic's Jeffrey Goldberg, BBC World News America's Katty Kay, Al-Arabiya's Hisham Melhem, and NBC's Andrea Mitchell.

(SUNDAY 01/11) As America prepares to inaugurate a new president, we begin a special series on Presidential Leadership -- an opportunity for an in-depth discussion on the many challenges facing Barack Obama. First up: tackling some of the serious problems confronting black communities across the country such as inner city violence, unemployment, high incarceration and school dropout rates, as well as the need for parental responsibility. As the first black president of the United States, Obama has been an inspiration to so many, but how can he provide real leadership on these issues? Joining us: Bill Cosby and Dr. Alvin Poussaint, co-authors of the bestselling book "Come on People: On the Path from Victims to Victors," and two political leaders on the front-lines of this struggle, Washington D.C. Mayor Adrian Fenty and the congresswoman representing South Central Los Angeles, Rep. Maxine Waters. Then, the economy enters a free-fall and the president-elect urges lawmakers to act fast. Can Obama's plan prevent an economic depression? When might Americans feel some relief? And is there long-term danger as government spending and America's debt reach historic levels? Our special economic roundtable weighs in: Economic adviser to president-elect Obama, Fmr. Rep. David Bonior (D-MI); The Wall Street Journal's Paul Gigot; CNBC's John Harwood, Vanity Fair's Bethany McLean; and Moody's Economy.com's Mark Zandi.

(SUNDAY 01/18) Exclusive! Just two days before the historic inauguration of President-elect Barack Obama, we kick off NBC's week of coverage with incoming chief of staff, Rahm Emanuel. He'll discuss the many challenges that await the nation's new leader when he takes office -- including foreign policy, the economy, the new cabinet and much more. Then, Inauguration day will be a time of great significance in this country. How will Obama capture the moment and will his presidency be able to live up to the high expectations? We'll have insights and analysis from our special roundtable: NBC's Tom Brokaw, The New York Times' David Brooks, presidential historian Doris Kearns Goodwin, PBS's Tavis Smiley and NBC's Chuck Todd.

(SUNDAY 01/25) Exclusive! National Economic Council Director Lawrence Summers joins us to discuss the nation's economic crisis and what the new Obama administration plans to do to get our economy back on track. Then, House Democrats bring their $825 billion economic stimulus bill to the House floor next week and President Obama signs an executive order to close the Guantanamo Bay prison camp within a year. Just two of several matters that Republicans are taking issue with. We'll get reaction and assess the prospects for any bipartisan solutions from the leader of the House Republicans, Rep. John Boehner. Plus, just five days in and with just over half of his new cabinet confirmed, how is the new administration faring on key issues like the economy, energy and foreign policy? We'll have insights and analysis from our political roundtable: The New York Times' Tom Friedman, The Weekly Standard's Stephen Hayes, and NPR's Michele Norris.

(SUNDAY 02/01) More bad economic news this week: The U.S. economy shrunk at its fastest pace in nearly 27 years during the 4th quarter of 2008 and the number of unemployed Americans is at a record high. But there was still no bi-partisan support for a solution on Capitol Hill. Will President Obama attract Republican support when the stimulus package hits the Senate next week? We'll have a debate on economic solutions between two key senators: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchison (R-TX), a member of the Banking Committee, and Sen. John Kerry (D-MA), a member of the Finance Committee. Then, the other trillion dollar question: What should government do about America's struggling banks and crumbling housing market? Will taxpayers be called on provide yet more bailout money? We'll have insights and analysis from our economic roundtable: CNBC's Erin Burnett, Forbes' Steve Forbes, and Moody's Economy.com's Mark Zandi.

(SUNDAY 02/08) As the recession continues to batter America's work-force, President Obama places increased urgency on passing the stimulus package. We'll go through the very latest negotiations, sticking points and potential areas of agreement with a panel of key lawmakers: Sen. John Ensign (R-NV), Rep. Barney Frank (D-MA), Sen. Claire McCaskill (D-MO), and Rep. Mike Pence (R-IN). Then, the second installment of our "Presidential Leadership Series" -- our in-depth look at the leadership tests facing this new president. We'll explore the on-going and new challenges in Iraq and Afghanistan. How long will American troops likely remain on the ground? And how do we now define victory? We'll have insights and analysis from the Washington Post's Senior Pentagon Correspondent, Tom Ricks. In 2006, he wrote the best-selling book "Fiasco: The American Military Adventure in Iraq" and has now completed a new book entitled "The Gamble: General David Petraeus and the American Military Adventure in Iraq, 2006-2008."

(SUNDAY 02/15) The $787 billion economic stimulus bill is one step closer to the president's desk, but the process has been far from bipartisan and many questions still remain. Once the bill is passed, how long will it take for Americans to actually see some relief? How will the Obama administration tackle the bank bailout and foreclosure crisis? And what is the political fallout from the abrupt withdrawal of Republican Secretary of Commerce-designate Sen. Judd Gregg? All questions for our guest, senior adviser to President Obama David Axelrod. Plus, insights and analysis on all this and more from our roundtable: National Journal's Ron Brownstein, The Washington Post's Eugene Robinson, Politico's Roger Simon, and The Wall Street Journal's Kimberley Strassel.

(SUNDAY 02/22) Exclusive! As an unprecedented economic crisis grips the nation, many states are hitting a breaking point: lost jobs, failing businesses, home foreclosures and record revenue shortfalls. The president says help is on the way, but will all states accept it? Two GOP governors with very different views of the stimulus bill weigh in: The man who will deliver his party's response to President Obama's Tuesday night speech to Congress and a likely contender for the White House in 2012, Gov. Bobby Jindal of Louisiana. And a man who has been standing by the president's side in the stimulus debate, Gov. Charlie Crist of Florida. Then, our roundtable gets to the bottom of the housing debate and offers insights on a very busy political week: Al Hunt, Executive Editor for Washington of Bloomberg News; Michele Norris, Host of NPR's "All Things Considered"; and Becky Quick, Co-anchor of CNBC's "Squawk Box."

(SUNDAY 03/01) After almost six years and the loss of more than 4,000 American lives, President Obama has announced plans to remove all U.S. combat troops from Iraq by August 31, 2010. But is this exit strategy realistic? Is the worst really over in Iraq? And will an increase of 17,000 U.S. troops in Afghanistan be enough to stem the growing violence? We'll have an exclusive -- the first television interview, since President Obama took office, with Secretary of Defense Robert Gates, the man who faces the enormous task of implementing these new military strategies. Then, President Obama has announced a $3.6 trillion budget plan, but not everyone thinks it's the best policy to lift our nation out of the current economic turmoil. Is the president's budget proposal too ambitious or will it get our nation's economy back on track? And how will the Republican Party position itself against a popular president? Our political roundtable weighs in: Fmr. Rep. Harold Ford, Jr. (D-TN); GOP Strategist Mike Murphy; Vanity Fair's Dee Dee Myers; and MSNBC's Joe Scarborough.

(SUNDAY 03/08) As the nation's jobless rate hits its highest point in more than 25 years, and more major U.S. companies are at the breaking point, what must Washington now do for the American people? Can Republicans and Democrats work together to find a solution? We'll have an exclusive debate with two key lawmakers: Sen. Lindsey Graham (R-SC) of the Budget Committee and Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) of the Banking Committee. Plus, insights and analysis on all the economic and political news from our roundtable: "Lords of Finance" author Liaquat Ahamed; CNBC's Erin Burnett; Fmr. House Speaker Newt Gingrich (R-GA); and editor-in-chief of U.S. News & World Report Mort Zuckerman.

(SUNDAY 03/15) Encouraging news from Wall Street after stocks rally this week, but there are still troubling signs on the horizon: U.S. household wealth saw its biggest annual decline on record; jobless claims reach another high; and home foreclosure filings jumped 30% in February. Will the president's plan be able to bring our economy back from the brink? We'll hear from both sides of the debate: the Chair of the President's Council of Economic Advisers Dr. Christina Romer and the House Republican Whip Rep. Eric Cantor (R-VA) join us for exclusive interviews. Plus, Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner and his agency are under increasing criticism. Are they making the right moves? And on the Republican side of the aisle, more controversy over comments from the newly installed RNC Chairman Michael Steele. Our roundtable weighs in on this and all the week's other economic and political news: The Week's David Frum, BBC's Katty Kay, CNBC's Steve Liesman, and PBS's Tavis Smiley.

(SUNDAY 03/22) Exclusive! Anger and outrage over AIG and executive bonuses: Who should be held accountable and will this anger undermine the president as he tries to take additional steps to save the financial system and restore confidence? With us: three leaders on the front lines who are advocating increased spending and attention on shoring up the country's infrastructure. They met with President Obama today at the White House and we'll hear from them exclusively on Sunday: NYC Mayor Michael Bloomberg, Gov. Ed Rendell (D-PA), and Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger (R-CA). Plus, insights and analysis on where the President and his economic team go from here -- we'll be joined in our political roundtable by NBC's Tom Brokaw and CNBC's Erin Burnett.

(SUNDAY 03/29) As the economic crisis grows, the battle over the budget intensifies and jobless claims set another new record. Can the President's plan to shore up the U.S. financial system restore confidence and get credit flowing again? We'll have the first live Sunday morning interview with the man charged with heading up the effort, Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner. Plus, the view from the other side of the aisle: An exclusive interview on the economy and foreign policy with President Obama's former rival for the White House, Sen. John McCain (R-AZ).
